

Surviving care:

Achieving justice and healing for the Forgotten Australians

Edited by Richard Hil and Elizabeth Branigan

This book seeks to make a significant contribution to a growing body of work that charts what happened to former care residents referred to as the Forgotten Australians and what governments and others have done to address the challenges that face this now aging population. While many former residents have gone on to have productive and fulfilling lives many others have had the opposite experience. Yet what all these people share in common is that they spent time in institutions away from their families, often in very difficult circumstances. Despite a growing number of research studies and autobiographies, we still know remarkably little about the experiences of former care residents and the challenges that now face them.

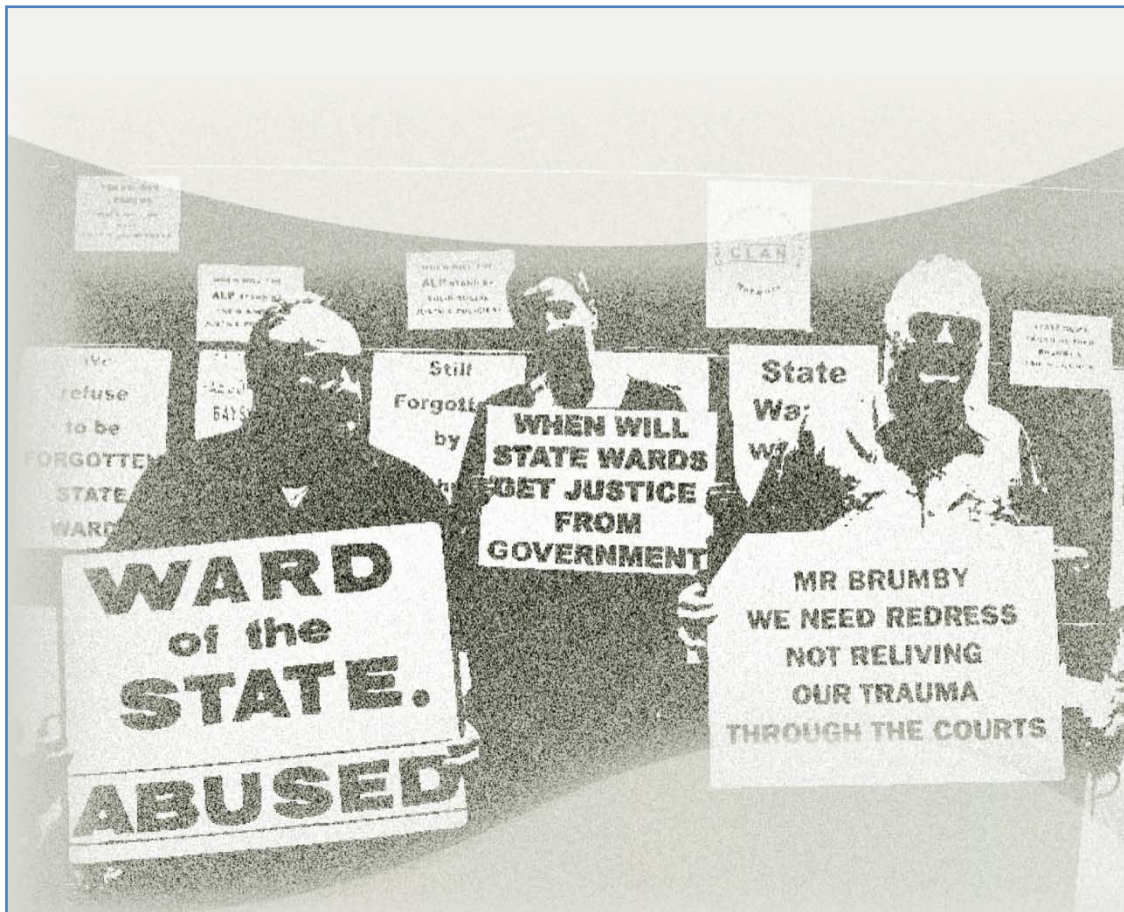

Dr. Elizabeth Branigan is the Academic Programs Director at the Australian Centre for Human Rights Education at RMIT University in Melbourne. She wrote When Four Braids Come Together: Motherhood and Activism in South India (Lambert Academic Press, 2010), co-wrote After the Orphanage: Life beyond the children's home (UNSW Press, 2009), Beyond the Home Gates: Life after Growing up in Catholic Institutions (MacKillop Family Services, 2009) and co-edited Women and Work: Current RMIT University Research (RMIT University Publishing, 2007).

Dr Richard Hil is an Honorary Associate in the Centre for Peace and Conflict Studies, University of Sydney, Australia, and author of several books in the areas of criminology, youth studies and peace and conflict studies. His latest book, Erasing Iraq: The Human Cost of Carnage, with Mike Otterman and Paul Wilson was released in 2010.
